This Scottish Government (2008) defined recovery as a process which enables an individual to move on towards a drug-free life, as an active and contributing member of society. This conference builds on the foundation laid last year, by considering the prevention of further harm to those seeking recovery, as well as to others, such as those within their families.

The Conference is useful to all Health and Social Services Professionals, Primary Health Care Teams, Educational Professionals, Voluntary Organisations and others involved in providing services to people with substance misuse problems.
